Court Square Group and Cisco Systems to Lead Seminar on Network Security

Court Square Group and Cisco Systems will lead a seminar on how to manage and improve network security in an age of hackers and internal security risks.

Springfield, Mass., September 15, 2008 – Court Square Group, Inc., a professional services consulting firm specializing in strategic information technology, business processes and project management, announced today that it will collaborate with Cisco Systems on a free, interactive event “Network Security, How Safe is Safe Enough?”. The seminar will be offered by representatives of the two companies on Friday, October 10th, from 8:30 until 10:00 a.m. at the Sovereign Bank Building on 1350 Main Street, Springfield, Mass. in the 3rd floor community room. Light refreshments will be served. Presenters include Joe Piperata, Cisco Systems Engineer, and Scott Bussell, Senior Network and Security Specialist, Court Square Group.

The discussion will cover how companies choose, install and manage the basics for network security, including firewalls, and anti-virus software. However, with the many real dangers threatening companies today, minimum protection is not enough.

Companies need to think about security in a holistic fashion, which includes the dangers from within that are enabled by poor enforcement policies and human factors. Moreover, the danger from increasingly sophisticated hackers can compromise any network.

Cisco’s Piperata will talk about how security protection needs to evolve to meet these new challenges. Court Square’s Bussell will present an interactive “test” to help you find out just how safe you are. Other issues covered include overall security policy, how to become more proactive about security, how to protect offsite computing, and more.
